Director's Note

Montana's Office of State Public Defender (OPD) employees work every day to ensure justice prevails. In the last two years, our attorneys have represented adults and children in more than 67,000 new cases in 179 courts. That number is significant, but it doesn't tell the entire story.

Each region of Montana has social and economic differences that can make case assignments and representation a challenge. Collaboration with justice stakeholders to divert clients into treatment programs for substance abuse or mental health services became even more difficult when COVID-19 entered our world. Violent crime is increasing in some areas, and OPD is responsible for more capital cases than ever before. These are just some of the challenges over the past two years.

As you review the information contained in this statutorily required report, remember our work has a different look every day. One day it might be the removal of four children in a dependent neglect case, where OPD is responsible for representing both the children and the parent(s). The next it could be a homicide of a family member or an involuntary mental health commitment. Each new case represents a client, young and old, all entitled to effective counsel. Over the past 14 years, case counts have grown but our obligation to improving services for clients has not changed. We will continue to balance our services with fiscal responsibility to produce better client outcomes.

- Rhonda Lindquist, Director

"The ultimate measure of a man is not where he stands in moments of convenience, but where he stands at times of challenge and controversy."

- Martin Luther King

OPD Training Department FY 2019 Trainings

The Training Department's focus for FY 19 was to provide professional training to the entire agency. This holistic approach began with training events on a number of topics relevant to social workers and investigators. In August and September, we sent investigators and social workers to out-of-state conferences, then reaped the benefit of the knowledge they gained at the annual conference in October. The depth and breadth of the integrated training events was a source of knowledge our employees were able to use in their daily jobs.

The Annual Conference, held in October 2018, brought experts from across the country presenting on a number of topics, including handling very difficult felony cases. We were also proud to have our mitigation team, comprised of an attorney and a social worker, present on what they learned at an out-of-state conference focused on team mitigation practice. The OPD Management Summit occurred in June, which set the table for a very successful training year in FY 20.

OPD hosted or took part in over 20 training events in FY 2019 and trained over 500 individuals. Most of the trainings were in conference form, with supplemental webinars for staff and attorneys. We were proud to participate in the continued growth and development of an amazing group of professionals dedicated to public defense.

OPD Training Department FY 2020 Trainings

The Training Department made significant gains in FY 20, offering perhaps the most training opportunities in the agency's history. We offered dozens of training opportunities and had over 1,000 total attendees. Thanks to OPD leadership, we have taken great strides in our ability to offer training opportunities in a variety of ways, including utilizing technology to train our staff.

The centerpiece of our training year was the Annual Conference in Butte. The conference offered 39 unique training sessions (up from 19 the year before), had an investigator-specific training track, a dependent neglect focus, and sessions on wellness. Attendance at the annual conference was up, as were the total number of CLEs.

The Training Department also increased the number of webinars offered to its staff to over two dozen from experts both inside and outside the agency. The topics ranged from dependent neglect issues to ethics with a total of over 300 attendees. The Training Department also used its newfound technological expertise to offer weekly meetups, including how attorneys are handling trials in the COVID era. Pre-pandemic, we held live conferences, and we joined with partners to support their events.

The Agency approved a Learning Management System (LMS) for the Training Department in the Spring, which is an exciting development. This tool will be vital for providing in-depth course work throughout the year, and it can be done virtually. While live trainings will not go away, we anticipate that the LMS will allow us to train our employees efficiently on an ongoing basis.

At the end of FY 20, the Training Department deployed the virtual conference concept with the Support Staff Summer Series. This virtual training was a weekly series focused on a variety of topics important to our stellar administrative support team. We anticipate using this as a model going forward. In sum, FY 20 was a successful year for the Training Department, and we anticipate an even stronger FY 21.

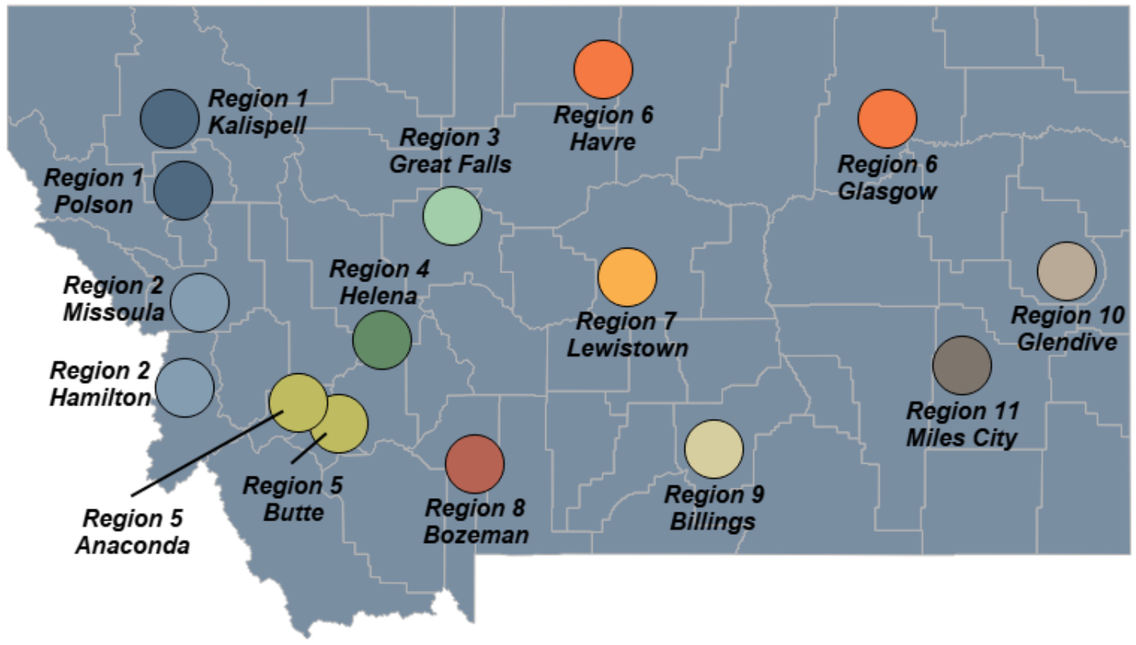
Division 1, Public Defender Division



The attorneys, support staff, investigators and social workers who make up the Public Defender Division strive every day to provide positive outcomes for their clients, who are often the poorest and most disadvantaged members of Montana's society. They suffer from severe mental illness, have grown up in broken homes, and their experience in society more often manifests in barriers not opportunities.

Despite the challenges, the Public Defender Division has achieved many fine results in 2020. One region has obtained not guilty verdicts in six out of seven jury trials. Other trials have resulted in acquittals on charges that carried hundreds of years in prison, thereby saving taxpayers millions of dollars in incarceration costs, not to mention ensuring an innocent person remains free.

Child welfare cases also demand attention from the Public Defender Division. Working with case managers, social workers, peer behavioral support specialists, and other members of the community, public defenders bring a holistic approach, giving parents the tools and support they need to be successful caregivers for their children. Maintaining Montana's families is a task we take seriously.

Whether it be in courts, offices, jails, treatment facilities, living rooms, or the local McDonalds, public defenders are out in Montana communities meeting with clients and their families, trying to achieve the best results possible. The Public Defender Office isn't just a law firm, it's a client-centered agency dedicated to addressing the issues that led our clients to involvement with the criminal justice system by connecting clients with community services. One can live in Montana and not truly see the level of poverty and related challenges that exist in our State. Those in the Public Defender system see it every day, and every day we are working to make a change for the good – for our clients, for Montana.

Appellate Defender
Chad Wright, Division Administrator
13.5 Appellate Defenders | 4 Legal Support Staff

Division 2, Appellate Defender Division

The Appellate Defender Division is a small group of specialized OPD attorneys, support staff and OPD contractors who practice almost exclusively in the Montana Supreme Court. Receiving cases from all over Montana, the Appellate Division serves as the last line of defense to ensure justice for Montanans convicted of misdemeanor and felony criminal offenses, juveniles adjudicated under the Youth Court Act, mothers and fathers whose parental rights have been terminated and those citizens who have been involuntarily committed to the Montana State Hospital. In conjunction with the Public Defender and Conflict Divisions, the Appellate Division strives to protect the fundamental constitutional rights of our clients, implement the legislative goals of criminal justice reform and answer the basic question about whether our indigent clients were treated fairly in the court system.

The Appellate Division has struggled for years with an ever-present backlog of appeals. In criminal cases, this backlog has led to unacceptable delays. Indigent clients wait over five months before an attorney is even assigned to represent them. The Montana Supreme Court reports the median criminal appeal takes around 500 days from the filing of the Notice of Appeal until the case is submitted to the Court for decision. In contrast, when the Appellate Division's full resources are employed in parental termination appeals, the median filing time from the Notice of Appeal to submission to the Court runs around 160 days. See, Supreme Court Performance Measures/Statistics.

In FY 2020, OPD's new management team lifted previous restrictions placed on the Appellate Division to address the criminal appeal backlog crisis. A backlog reduction plan was developed, and three phases of the plan were implemented with great success. However, the onset of COVID-19 reduced inner office productivity as over half of the Appellate Division employees provided childcare. Using its extensive knowledge of electronic filing, remote conferencing and document sharing, the Appellate Division quickly adapted to telework and staggered schedules. The backlog reduction plan was then modified to maintain current productivity levels through the end of FY 2020. The Appellate Division looks to capitalize on its stability to tackle the unacceptable delays through continued work with its clients, the OPD trial divisions, the Montana Supreme Court, the Clerk of the Montana Supreme Court, the official court reporters and its counterparts in the Appellate Services Bureau of the Montana Attorney General's Office.

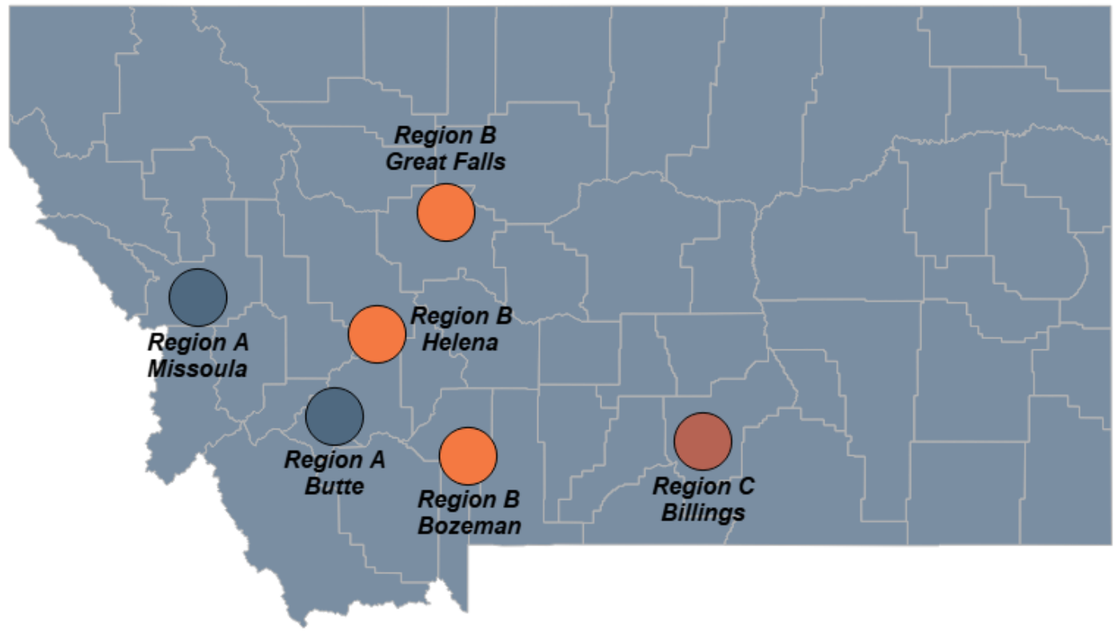
Division 3, Conflict Defender Division



Over the past three years the Conflict Defender Division has grown into a vibrant, well-supervised division with a statewide presence. The Conflict Defender Division now has attorney-staffed offices in Billings, Bozeman, Great Falls, Helena, and Missoula. Contract costs have been lowered every year through strategic deployment of FTE and active management of contractor services. The Conflict Defender Division and its managers continue to look for new ways to provide top quality legal representation for our indigent clients while at the same time striving to operate in the most fiscally responsible way.

In FY 2020 the expenditures of the Conflict Defender Division were significantly lower than its appropriation. This division is now a stable part of OPD and it will continue to make improvements in every aspect of its operations.
